Japan is infamous for an “earthquake” country.

Yet, you may be relieved to hear that houses might be easily collapsed by small earthquakes.

Now, there are some tips to make yourself easy and safe when an earthquake hits the town.

When an earthquake occurs,

① If you are at home, protect yourself first.

You may get hurt when furniture falls down.

- Find a safe place under a table/desk.

A fire may break out.

- Turn off the stove AFTER the tremors stop.

- Open the doors and windows to get an evacuation route.

- Wear slippers/shoes inside the house not to hurt your feet by broken things.

- Trip the circuit breaker when leaving the house.

Fragile things (e.g. window glasses, drinking glasses, ceramics) may be broken.

② If you are outside or in the office, protect yourself first.

Window glasses may fall down.
Concrete-block walls and vending machines may fall down.

- Protect your head.
- Do not walk on the edge of the road.

Blackout may happen.

- Do not use the elevator in evacuation.

Roads and bridges may have severe damages.

- Park the car on the roadside, and evacuate on foot.
- Leave the car key in the car.

< What you can do to prevent serious damages by earthquakes >

Fix the furniture to the wall/ceiling.

Do not stack things on high places.

Decide the evacuation route and check the place of a nearby shelter.

Prepare necessary items to bring in evacuation.

The harvest season! Let's walk around Kureha Hills

Shall we have a walk around the Kureha Hills under the clear blue sky? You may be able to encounter many unique birds and plants there.

On every first Saturday of the month, there is an event called "The Tsukiichi Walk" which has two routes, "Kurehayama" and "Johyama", with 5km and 8km courses respectively.

During the hiking, volunteer guides explain birds, plants, and ruins.

By the end of this year, a connecting bridge between Kurehayama and Johyama will be partially completed, and you can see a magnificent view of the Tateyama mountain range from the bridge.
